OUR GUEST SPEAKER

RYUJI CHUA

filmmaker & animal advocate

Ryuji Chua is a filmmaker and animal advocate who makes stuff about animals and our relationship with them. His work covers topics like factory farming, animal sentience, speciesism, wild animal suffering and veganism, and is known for communicating about these polarizing topics in an accessible and non-judgemental way. Ryuji has published videos with animal protection organizations like Surge, Sentient Media and Faunalytics, spoken at schools like the University of Warwick, UC Berkeley and the University of Chicago, and was featured on The Daily Show with Trevor Noah to discuss animal ethics and his independent documentary "How Conscious Can A Fish Be?". He serves on the board of directors of Japanese animal advocacy non-profit Lib and as board president of Vegan Hacktivists.
